

Econ Advising

There are many ways to get accurate information regarding economics courses, major requirements and opportunities in the department. Both the bulletin and the department's website have timely accurate information regarding the study of economics at Columbia. On the website, there is an FAQ which answers the most common questions that students have, and there is an Announcements page which posts updates on major requirements and course offerings.

To get the answer to a specific question or to go over a proposed course of study, you may contact the advisors at econ-advising@columbia.edu . You may also meet with them in person during their office hours. These office hours are posted on the advisors' page of the economics department website. Any student at Columbia (not just declared majors) may meet with them to discuss his or her course program.
